
Required Minimum Distributions After Death

Non-Spouse Beneficiaries

Funds in both traditional IRAs¹ and qualified retirement plans may not be kept inside these tax-deferred accounts indefinitely. Under federal law the money must eventually be distributed, and then taxed, through yearly “Required Minimum Distributions,” or RMDs.²

The death of an account owner does not eliminate this requirement. However, the manner in which the assets must be distributed post-death will vary, depending on:

- Date of account owner’s death: The rules discussed here generally apply to account owners dying before December 31, 2019. For individuals dying after December 31, 2019, the SECURE Act significantly changed the required distribution requirements for inherited qualified plan and IRA accounts, particularly for non-spouse beneficiaries.³
- Death before or after the required beginning date: During life, an account owner must generally begin distributions no later than the “Required Beginning Date,” or RBD. One provision of the SECURE Act changed the “trigger” date for beginning these required distributions from age 70½ to age 72. This change applies to distributions required to be made after December 31, 2019, to individuals who reach age 70½ after that date. Under prior law, 70½ was the mandated age for beginning these distributions. For purposes of the examples in this report, age 70½ is considered to be the RBD even though, for some individuals, the actual RBD will be age 72.⁴
- Who inherits the assets: The law mandates different required minimum distribution schedules depending on who inherits the assets in an account.

¹ For required minimum distribution purposes, the term “traditional IRA” also includes SIMPLE IRAs and SEP IRAs. Roth IRAs are subject to different rules.

² Under one section of the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act, the RMD requirement for 2020, including the RMD requirement applicable to beneficiaries of inherited accounts, is waived. The next required minimum distribution will be for calendar year 2021. State or local law may vary.

³ For governmental plans, the new rules apply to individuals dying after December 31, 2021. Special rules apply to plans maintained pursuant to collective bargaining agreements.

⁴ The RBD for qualified plan participants is April 1 of the year following the later of (a) the year the participant reaches his or her RBD, or (b) the year he or she retires. A more than 5% owner must begin to receive distributions by April 1 of the year following the year he or she reaches the RBD.

Required Minimum Distributions After Death

Non-Spouse Beneficiary Required Minimum Distributions

If the designated beneficiary is not the surviving spouse, or if there is no designated beneficiary, at a minimum the funds must be distributed as shown in the following tables:

Owner Dies Before The Required Beginning Date

Situation	Distribution Requirement	Example
Individual Beneficiary	RMDs for the beneficiary must begin by 12/31 of the year after the year of death. Distributions are made over the beneficiary's life expectancy. ¹	Paul dies in 2020 at age 67, leaving his IRA to his daughter Paulette, age 42. Paulette must begin to take RMDs by 12/31/21, using her age in 2021 of 43. The RMD for 2021 would be calculated by dividing the account balance on 12/31/20 by Paulette's age-43 life expectancy (from the Single Life Table) of 40.7. ²
Multiple Beneficiaries (Assumes that the account is not divided into separate shares.)	RMDs for the beneficiaries must begin by 12/31 of the year after the year of the owner's death. Distributions are made over the oldest beneficiary's life expectancy.	Paul dies in 2020 at age 67, leaving his IRA to his brother Bob, age 76, and his daughter Paulette, age 42. RMDs to them must begin by 12/31/21 and must be made over Bob's life expectancy as of his birthday in the year after Paul's death. The RMD for 2021 would be calculated by dividing the account balance on 12/31/20 by Bob's 2021 (Single Life Table) life expectancy, for age 77, of 12.1. ¹
No Designated Beneficiary, the Estate, a Charity, or a Non-Qualifying Trust	The entire amount must be distributed by the end of the fifth year after the year the owner dies.	Paul dies on 01/01/20, at age 68, leaving his IRA to his estate. The entire IRA balance must be distributed by 12/31/25. ¹

¹ A qualified plan may require, or allow a plan participant to elect, that the entire amount be distributed by the end of the fifth year after the participant dies.

² The life expectancy factor is reduced by one for each year after the year of the first required distribution.

Required Minimum Distributions After Death

Owner Dies After The Required Beginning Date

Situation	Distribution Requirement	Example
Individual Beneficiary	A RMD must be made for the deceased owner for the year of death. RMDs for the beneficiary must begin by 12/31 of the year after the year of the owner's death. Distributions are made over the longer of the owner's life expectancy, or the beneficiary's life expectancy.	Paul dies in 2020 at age 72, leaving his IRA to his older brother Bob, age 76. Because Paul has already passed his RBD, a distribution must be made for him for 2020. The RMD for 2020 is determined by dividing the account balance as of 12/31/19 by 25.6, the life expectancy (from the Uniform Lifetime Table) for a 72-year-old account owner. For 2021 and later years, the RMDs are calculated using the longer of the Single Life Table life expectancy for Paul in the year of his death, reduced by one (age 72 =15.5-1=14.5) or Bob's life expectancy in the year after Paul's death (age 77=12.1). In this case, Paul's theoretical life expectancy is greater. The RMD for 2021 is calculated by dividing the account balance as of 12/31/20 by 14.5. ¹
Multiple Beneficiaries (Assumes that the account is not divided into separate shares.)	A RMD must be made for the deceased owner for the year of death. RMDs for the beneficiaries must begin by 12/31 of the year after the year of death, with distributions over the longer of the owner's life expectancy or the oldest beneficiary's life expectancy.	Paul dies in 2020 at age 72, leaving his IRA to his son Peter, age 46, and his daughter Paulette, age 42. Because Paul has already passed his RBD, a distribution for 2020 must be made for him. This distribution is calculated by dividing the account balance as of 12/31/19 by 25.6, the life expectancy (from the Uniform Lifetime Table) for a 72 year old. For 2021 and later years, the RMDs are calculated using the longer of the Single Life Table life expectancy for Paul in the year of his death, reduced by one (age 72=15.5-1=14.5) or Peter's life expectancy (he's older than Paulette) in the year after Paul's death (age 47=37.0). In this case, Peter's life expectancy is the greater. The RMD for 2021 is calculated by dividing the account balance as of 12/31/20 by 37.0. ²

¹ The life expectancy factor is reduced by one for each year after the year of the first required distribution.

² The life expectancy factor is reduced by one for each year after the year of the first required distribution.

Required Minimum Distributions After Death

Situation	Distribution Requirement	Example
No Designated Beneficiary, the Estate, a Charity, or a Non-Qualifying Trust	A RMD must be made for the deceased owner for the year of death. Thereafter, RMDs are based on the owner's life expectancy in the year of death.	Paul dies in 2020, at age 75, leaving his IRA entirely to charity. A RMD must be made for him for 2020, calculated using his age 75 life expectancy (from the Uniform Lifetime Table) of 22.9. For 2021 and later years, Paul's life expectancy in the year of his death (from the Single Life Table), reduced by one for each subsequent year, is used to calculate the RMD. For 2021, Paul's life expectancy would be 12.4, (his 2020 life expectancy at age 75 of 13.4-1). ¹

Other Distribution Options

Funds in an inherited IRA or qualified retirement plan may also be distributed as a single lump-sum or as periodic or occasional distributions which withdraw the money at a rate faster than the RMDs required by federal tax law. However, such accelerated distributions will subject the funds to current income tax more quickly than will the RMD withdrawals.

Post-Mortem Distribution Planning

IRAs and qualified plans allow an account owner to name a beneficiary or beneficiaries to receive the account proceeds should the owner die. From this pool of potential inheritors, IRS regulations require that the individual or group of individuals who will ultimately receive the funds, the "designated beneficiaries," be identified by September 30 of the year following the year of death.

This time delay allows for a certain amount of post-death estate and income tax planning by "removing" a potential beneficiary through either a qualified disclaimer, a cash distribution, or by dividing the IRA or qualified plan into separate accounts. Any separate accounts must generally be established by December 31 of the year following the year of the account owner's death. The life expectancies of those beneficiaries who remain on September 30 are then used to determine the RMDs for the years after death.

Entities without a measurable life span, such as the owner's estate, a charity, or a trust that does not meet certain IRS requirements, are not considered to be "designated beneficiaries" for RMD purposes. While such beneficiaries may inherit the funds in the account, distributions to these entities are generally made on less favorable terms.

Required Minimum Distributions After Death

Trusts

In order for the beneficiaries of a trust to qualify as “designated beneficiaries,” the trust must meet certain requirements:

- The trust must be valid under state law;
- The trust must be irrevocable or will, under its terms, become irrevocable upon the death of the account owner;
- The beneficiaries of the trust must be identifiable from the trust document; and
- Certain documents must be provided to the plan administrator.¹

Distributions to the trust are made over the theoretical life expectancy of the beneficiary. If there is more than one beneficiary, distributions are made over the theoretical life expectancy of the oldest beneficiary.

If a trust does not meet these requirements, consideration should be given to reforming the trust, assigning or disclaiming an interest in the trust, cashing-out certain beneficiaries, or separating interests in the trust.

Other Points

- Distributions from employer-sponsored qualified plans: Post-death payments to beneficiaries of qualified plans are typically based on the individual provisions of a particular plan. A lump-sum distribution, with its heavy, immediate taxation, is perhaps the most frequently encountered option.

The Pension Protection Act of 2006, effective for distributions after December 31, 2006, provides for a direct trustee-to-trustee transfer from a qualified plan to an IRA specifically designed to receive retirement assets inherited by a non-spouse beneficiary. The non-spouse beneficiary is not treated as the owner of the rolled-over assets. Required minimum distributions are made from the “inherited IRA” in accordance with the normal rules applicable to non-spouse beneficiaries.

Such an after-death transfer has the same result as if the decedent had moved the assets in his or her qualified plan into an IRA rollover prior to death.

¹ Generally, this must occur by October 31 of the year following the year of death.

Required Minimum Distributions After Death

Roth IRAs

Roth IRAs do not have a lifetime distribution requirements. Because of this, a Roth IRA owner is always viewed as having died before the RBD. Post-death distributions from Roth IRAs are thus governed by the “death before RBD” rules.

Seek Professional Guidance

The body of law and regulation surrounding required minimum distributions is complex and often confusing. Further, the failure to correctly distribute the required amounts from an IRA or qualified plan can result in a federal excise tax of 50% of the amount that should have been distributed. Individual state or local law may also provide penalties.

The advice and guidance of qualified professionals is strongly recommended.
